Derailment
dumps coal

Nine coal cars derailed Friday behind Daubert Chemical Company in the Industrial Park off of Ill. 38. The incident occurred on the Chicago Northwestern Railroad tracks about 2 p.m. No injuries were reported. A new quarter-mile track laying alongside the old tracks was to be installed later this month. Coal which was being transported by the railroad cars was spilled on the track and had to be cleared as repair operations began. (Telegraph Photo)

Justice Department may call grand jury in Hoffa case

DETROIT (AP) — Justice Department officials are considering whether to bring witnesses before a grand jury in an effort to crack the Jimmy Hoffa mystery, department sources say. They gave no indication of who might be called.

Ten days after the former Teamsters union president vanished, FBI and state officials were chasing leads, but with no public signs of progress.

The first subpoena in the case was authorized Friday by U.S. Atty. Ralph Guy. He said he was seeking records of telephone calls made from Hoffa's home in Lake Orion, Mich. A special grand jury already is sitting in Detroit to hear evidence of corruption and organized crime.

Meanwhile, Westinghouse Broadcasting reported today that blood stains were found on the seat of a car owned by Joe Giacalone, the son of reputed Mafia figure Anthony "Tony Jack" Giacalone, who refused FBI requests to submit to an interview. Hoffa's wife said Hoffa told her he was going to meet the elder Giacalone and others on July 30, the day he was last seen. Giacalone denies it.

Charles "Chuckie" O'Brien, Hoffa's foster son — reportedly a focus of the FBI probe — said he drove the car the day Hoffa disappeared.

Westinghouse quoted the younger Giacalone as saying the stains were dried fish blood. O'Brien said he was at the home of a local union official delivering a frozen salmon at about the time Hoffa vanished.

The FBI had no comment on the report, and would neither confirm nor deny that it has issued a search warrant to examine Giacalone's car.

O'Brien switched allegiances from Hoffa to his arch-rival, Teamsters union President Frank E. Fitzsimmons, a source close to the investigation said.

O'Brien was questioned for 3½ hours on Wednesday by the FBI.

Several investigators said Friday their prime theory in the case is that Hoffa was kidnapped or killed to prevent an expected attempt to recapture leadership of the 2.2-million-member Teamsters union from Fitzsimmons. The theory is as yet unsupported by any known evidence.

In Washingtonville, N.Y., longtime Hoffa friend Theodore Daley said he had been interviewed for two hours by FBI agents on Thursday.

Without elaborating, Daley, secretary treasurer of Teamsters Local 445, told newsmen: "I believe he's alive, knowing Jim Hoffa and the circumstances around his disappearance. I think he's being held against his will, for whatever purpose I am not sure. The who and the why, of course, is a mystery."

As the probe continued, the strain on Hoffa's family showed Friday in a momentary display of private grief and frustration by his son, Detroit attorney James P. Hoffa.

Talking briefly in a parking garage near his downtown law office, Hoffa was asked by an Associated Press reporter whether he had anything to support his hope that his father will be found alive.

"I'm not giving up," he said, his voice firm. Then the patience and composure he had displayed for more than a week of public questioning slipped away. Tears streaked his cheeks, he clenched his fists and he wept.

Fighting to regain control, he continued, "If this happened to your father, he'd want you to do everything you could to find him, just as my father does."

Later Friday, he rejoined his sister and mother at his father's home at Lake Orion, 41 miles from downtown Detroit, where the family has kept vigil since the disappearance.

He told newsmen there he would have nothing more to say that day.

Ford has party; goes on vacation

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Ford will celebrate his first year in office tonight at a private dinner party at the White House before leaving Sunday for a 15-day vacation visit to Vail, Colo.

On Friday, the President stopped in at two meetings of White House aides to express his thanks for their hard work during what he said had "been a successful year" since he came to office.

Ford actually was jumping the gun by a day, since he did not become President until Aug. 9, 1974, after Richard M. Nixon's resignation.

The President and Mrs. Ford scheduled an anniversary celebration dinner party with Vice President and Mrs. Nelson A. Rockefeller and five of the Rockefellers' children. The Ford's son, Jack, 23, also may attend, a White House spokesman said.

The Fords will fly to Vail

Sunday with stops en route at Fort Smith and Ft. Chaffee, Ark.

But Ford, who says he is in his best physical shape ever, won't just settle for vacationing. He plans to break up his two-week stay with side trips into seven states for 13 public appearances.

But for at least the first week Ford intends to relax, devoting a lot of time to his favorite sports and socializing with friends he has known from visits to Vail over the past 10 years.

Though Ford prefers Vail in its wintertime splendor as a ski resort, he also finds its summer sports, including swimming, golf and tennis much to his liking.

Aides say Ford expects to play golf at Vail Golf Club and Eagle Vail Golf Club. For tennis, he will try out the municipal courts.

He'll do his swimming at the private residence where he will be staying and also will have access to neighbors' outdoor pools.

As they did on a Vail vacation last winter, the President and his family will occupy the four-story chalet-style home of Richard D. Bass, which sits among tall spruce trees in a circle of some 18 private homes at the base of the ski mountain.

The Fords have been going to Vail since 1965 and own a three-bedroom condominium apartment in the center of Vail Village. But during Ford's trips as President, he used the more luxurious and secure home of Bass, a Dallas millionaire and resort developer.

The White House spokesman said Ford will pay Bass about $100 a day.

The Ford's daughter, Susan, who has been on a summer job as a news photographer in Topeka, Kan., will be joining her parents in Vail around Aug. 17.

Son Jack will be accompanying them from Washington and Steve Ford, who has been tracking grizzly bear in the Montana mountains, is expected to turn up, too.

The only absentee will be the Fords' married son, Michael.

No problem for Americans in Turkey

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Pentagon says Americans in Turkey are encountering "no major problems," although there are reports of spotty harassment since the Turks began taking control of U.S. bases in their country.

The Pentagon said Friday in a brief report that "some mail delivery has been delayed to various bases and commercial communications are operating below normal."

But it said "there is no evidence of a policy of harassment of U.S. personnel, although there have been some reports of minor inconveniences."

Obviously anxious to avoid widening the U.S.-Turkish split, the Pentagon said U.S. and Turkish commanders "are working together to insure the least possible disruption" to some 7,000 U.S. military personnel and 5,000 civilians, mostly wives and children.

It blamed a slowdown in telephone service primarily on "large numbers of attempted calls from the United States by families of military personnel in Turkey."

The only reported incident with violent overtones occurred Thursday at Izmir, a North Atlantic Alliance headquarters where Americans are stationed. Pentagon sources said some 20 to 30 young Turkish demonstrators forced Americans to leave the Izmir post exchange and then caused some damage.

No Americans were hurt, and Turkish police arrived to arrest the demonstrators, Pentagon sources said.

"When we landed, Deke (Slayton) didn't look like he felt too well. Because I hadn't had my oxygen mask on too long I passed out for about 40 seconds," he said. "Tom got my mask on, and after that I felt O.K."

Stafford said that because of the angle of the parachutes the spaceship hit the Pacific "like a ton of bricks." He said it turned upside down immediately, which is a habit of Apollo spaceships, adding to the confusion as the spacemen scrambled for oxygen masks to protect themselves from the gas.

But the spaceship then righted automatically and its ventilation system pushed the gas out of the cabin.

Brand takes blame for release of poison fumes

WASHINGTON (AP) — Apollo astronaut Vance D. Brand said today he was to blame for not throwing two switches which would have prevented poisonous gas fumes from entering the American spaceship as it returned to earth after the docking mission with Russia's Soyuz.

"I'll take the responsibility," Brand told a news conference. "The switches should have been turned on, and they weren't."

But Commander Thomas P. Stafford sought to soften the blame on Brand by saying all three crew members should have been alert to the checklist and seen to it that the switches were flipped at the proper time.

Stafford, Brand, and the third crewman, Donald K. Slayton, met reporters for the first time since their return to earth.

They flew to Washington Friday night from Honolulu, where they were hospitalized for treatment of lung ailments resulting from breathing the gas. After their hospitalization they spent an additional week in Hawaii. Their families joined them in the semi-isolation prescribed by doctors to reduce the chance of infection.

Stafford said all three spacemen have been given a "clean bill of health by the doctors." But he said they would be monitored for some time to make sure there is no recurrence of lung problems.

The switches which Brand should have thrown at 30,000 feet would have activated the automatic parachute system and also would have shut off steering jets. The gas fumes filtered into the spaceship from the jets, which continued to operate long after they should have.

Brand said that once the spacemen realized the switches had not been thrown they quickly activated the parachutes manually and "that backup procedure worked perfectly."

"We were all surprised," when the gas entered the cabin through an air intake valve, Brand said.

"It was mildly irritating to the face and the main thing was we coughed a lot," he said.

Jaworski on Watergate

MONTREAL (AP) — Exactly one year after Watergate drove Richard M. Nixon to resign the presidency, former special prosecutor Leon Jaworski made sober recollections sprinkled with some humor.

"I was never aware there was such a variety of words of hate in the messages I received," he told a packed dinner audience at the American Bar Association annual meeting Friday night.

He recalled a telegram from a colleague which said, "Go to Hell! Offensive Letter Follows."

He said another message read, "You had a rendezvous with history; but you blew it."

Then he said there was the correspondence from a 15-year-old Detroit youth named John Jaworski:

"Before you came along I did not amount to anything, and now even my teacher takes note of me."

Jaworski said one couple had named their child after him — but two weeks later, upset at Jaworski's stance on the issue of a Nixon pardon, they notified him they were changing the child's name.

Jaworski's mixture of humor and seriousness showed how the organized bar has adjusted to the scandal that at one point spotlighted its ethical sanctions and disciplinary procedures, and prompted a review of both that is still under way.

While Watergate dominated last year's meeting, this year there is only Jaworski's address and a panel on presidential power next week which will include James St. Clair, once Nixon's Watergate attorney.

Outgoing president James D. Fellers told newsmen earlier that the ABA is not lopsidedly concerned about Watergate's legacy and that the American public is "fed up" with hearing about it.

"And suppose the Supreme Court had not measured up courageously and judiciously to the traumatic issues that confronted all three branches of government and the nation as a whole."

"I read the thought."

Jaworski said, "The result would have been a chapter in our history books charging that our courts were ineffective and indolent. Respect for the administration of justice ... would have received a serious setback. Men in high places, whose sentences have become final, would have escaped the arm of the law."

Endorse Portuguese

LISBON, Portugal (AP) — Members of key military units endorsed a document drawn up by dissident moderate officers today in a move that threatened to capsize Communist-backed Premier Vasco Gonçalves' day-old government and split apart the ruling three-general junta.

President Francisco de Costa Gomes and internal security chief Gen. Otelo Saraiva de Carvalho, members of the junta with Gonçalves, were reported wavering in favor of the moderates.

The crisis built over a document by the moderate officers attacking Gonçalves for his Communist-line policies. Military units reported that the document was circulating freely in all three branches of the armed forces and said it was piling up signatures in favor of the moderate officers.

Among units reported against Gonçalves were the Amadora commando unit outside Lisbon, the armored unit at Santarem, a cavalry unit and an armored regiment at Caldas da Rainha.

The entire center military region approved the document. A transport unit voted 29-0 in favor. An anti-aircraft unit at Cascais was 70 per cent in favor and an infantry unit in Mafra backed the moderates by 90 per cent.

Nearly 1,000 white refugees from the Portuguese colony marched in Lisbon on Friday chanting, "We Want Work, Not Hunger," and "We Were Turned Out Of Our Homes And Don't Have Anything To Eat."

The marchers were among tens of thousands of white settlers who have fled from fighting among three black liberation movements in Angola, which is to become independent on Nov. 11.

Earlier Friday, Premier Vasco Gonçalves formed a new cabinet that he hoped would appease the opposition and quell Portugal's unrest and economic decline.

Introducing the new ministers, Gonçalves vowed, "In the fight against the neo-Fascist phenomenon that lately has been multiplying in our country, severity and repression will be used."

But there was little hope that the new government could end anti-Communist rioting that erupted across Portugal in the OREGON — Minutes after a bulletin announced on all police radios, Ogle County Sheriff's Deputies, state police officials and Rochelle police apprehended three persons wanted by Juneau County Sheriff's Deputies, Maustin, Wis.

Roy Arbuckle, Duane and Verna Wells, all of Bloomington, were apprehended by the three departments on Wisconsin charges of kidnapping and theft. The trio are alleged to have kidnapped Mrs. Mary Brown, 35, Rt. 2, Lyndon Station, Wis., and also took a stereo from the Brown home. Arbuckle, Mrs. Brown's ex-husband, Verna Wells, Mrs. Brown's daughter, and Duane Wells, were all being held in the Ogle County jail this morning for Wisconsin authorities.

Agency denies tapping phone calls

WASHINGTON (AP) — The National Security Agency reportedly denies "intercepting telephone calls of Americans going abroad," but the chairman of the House Intelligence Committee still has doubts.

Committee Chairman Otis G. Pike reported Friday the denial by Lt. Gen. Lew Allen Jr., the NSA's director, made in closed-door session. But Pike added, "I continue to have doubts and some of the other members do."

Pike, D-N.Y., told reporters the problem is in defining what constitutes an interception of an American's telephone call.

"Their directives tell them not to do it," Pike said, but he said he wants more information on not only what is supposed to happen but "on what really happens."

He warned reporters twice against assuming calls from the United States to foreign countries are monitored, indicating the calls are physically monitored by the NSA overseas.

FBI's Kelley willing to make reports

MONTREAL (AP) — FBI Director Clarence M. Kelley said today he is willing to make regular, sworn reports about the propriety and legality of his agency's intelligence-gathering.

"I would not be averse to reporting at regularly scheduled intervals, under oath, as to our performance and compliance with the rules," Kelley said. He apparently was referring to regular reports to congressional committees, but indicated he would be willing for at least part of any such reports to be made public.

"We stand accused of engaging in mail openings, promiscuity in using wiretaps, committing burglaries and a general disregard for individual rights," Kelley said.

"Without getting into the merits of these matters, I will acknowledge that in today's climate of opinion, we may fall short of the desired standards, considering our performance in retrospect," he continued.

Helsinki blueprints new Europe

By DON OAKLEY

The just-concluded 35-nation Helsinki Conference on Security and Co-operation in Europe has not legitimized and solidified Soviet control over its World War II conquests in Eastern Europe and the Baltic. Neither has it, with the stroke of three dozen pens, vanquished forever the specter of Communist expansion which has shadowed Western Europe for a generation, despite the fears and hopes of the partisans of these opposite views.

It is a law of nature as well as the lesson of human history that nothing stands still. The only thing permanent is change.

The political status quo established by the Congress of Vienna in 1815, to which the Helsinki summit has been compared, though it ensured general peace in Europe for a hundred years, began to be eroded as soon as its distinguished delegates went home to their respective capitals. The very forces of change in Europe and the world which brought about and made possible the "understanding" between East and West in 1975 continue to operate, and the solemn intentions of its 35 signatories notwithstanding, the Helsinki declaration is no guarantee of what the shape of the world will be a century from now, or even a decade.

In the 19th century the most potent force at work in Europe was nationalism—the impassioned struggle to forge unified nations with unified destinies, articulated by such men as Italy's Giuseppe Mazzini and Germany's Heinrich von Treitschke and others. Subjugated to these larger causes were the individualities and heritages of the various ethnic groups within the newly formed nations.

Our own time, especially in recent years and especially in Western Europe, has witnessed the emergence of a host of mini-nationalism—Scottish, Welsh, Basque, Irish, Breton, etc.

"One could probably chart the rising curve of ethnicity alongside the rising curve of West European economic integration and find them virtually parallel," writes American journalist David Binder in "European Community" magazine.

Paradoxically, "in the very degree that a supranational European identity becomes evident, the millennia-old identities of the long-submerged minorities surface, too. They rise like some sunken island of yore, with volcanic force, smoking and throwing off showers of sparks."

One ignores such phenomena at one's peril, says Binder, for the oppression of minorities has stirred more than one violent war on the European continent.

The increased emphasis on ethnic identity may actually be one of the byproducts of detente. After all, he points out, in periods of confrontation such as the Cold War, it is more natural to submerge or ignore nuances of national differences. In periods of calm, such as we now seem to have embarked upon, it is equally natural to recall the values and traditions that set one people off from another.

The absorption of the Baltic states into the Soviet Union in World War II dealt a harsh blow to the national aspirations of Estonians, Latvians and Lithuanians. Yet as long as one Baltic-American keeps the national idea alive, it will survive, he believes.

In the Europe of today, the borders are becoming more permeable. Millions of West Europeans are traveling, working, living and vacationing in countries other than their homelands. Though the number is less in Eastern Europe, there, too, the process is at work.

At Helsinki, in exchange for Western recognition of the "inviolability" of present-day borders, the Soviet Union agreed to the right of nations and peoples to change those borders peacefully. Rather than "cementing" the status quo 1975, the historic Helsinki conference will encourage an increasing flow of contacts between Europeans, with consequences we can only speculate about but which at this juncture appear definitely heartening.

There's joy in the Kremlin

Let us be clear-eyed as possible. The Russians' view of detente is that it should keep the eastern half of Europe safe for their kind of political and economic system, while increasing the prospect that that system can spread into the western half of Europe.

The West's view is a limited mirror-image of that: limited, because the system the West wants to preserve in its part of Europe is pluralism, which includes the possibility of a country choosing to go communist of its own free will.

The one major proviso, by both sides, is a desire to keep the competition between them this side of war, and a recognition that this requires some serious collaboration in the fields of arms control and crisis-management.

The cold war was one step on the safe side of a hot war. Detente is two steps. But for neither communists nor non-communists does it mean renunciation of the ideas they believe in, or of the hope of spreading those ideas over the dividing line.

By that test, the monster of a document that 35 heads of government or their stand-ins signed at Helsinki is a victory on points for the Russians.

It is true that the Russians have been argued out of a number of things they wanted to achieve. They have had to drop their proposal that any idea of extending human freedom in eastern Europe should be subject to the present, notably unfree, "laws and customs" of that area. They have had to accept that the frontiers of Europe, which they would have liked to say were utterly unchangeable, can at least in theory be changed by peaceful agreement. They have had to say there will be no intervention in other countries' internal affairs, which could make it a little harder for them to do another Czechoslovakia; although it could also make it harder for Western countries, on the other side of the line, to prevent another Portugal.

It is also true that these two years of haggling in Geneva have not exactly improved the Soviet government's reputation for liberalism and good-neighborliness. But none of these points of detail, useful though its provisions carries the binding force of international law. But it carries all the political force of a declaration signed by virtually every head of government in Europe and North America with exactly the sort of ceremonial fanfare the Russians always wanted.

That is the central weakness of this whole "security conference. The Russians will point to the political commitment undertaken by the West when they defend what they like about the Helsinki declaration, which is its apparent confirmation of the ideological division of Europe. They will point to the absence of legal commitments in trying to fend off what they do not like about it—its passages, woolly and loosely worded though they are, about human rights and liberties.

The process that has come to be called detente, which is really a period of East-West maneuvering for advantage, opened in 1970. The first round, consisting of Willy Brandt's 1970 treaties with Russia and Poland and the 1971 agreement about Berlin, was a clear success for the Russians: in return for accepting the status quo in the half-city of Berlin, they got Brandt's acceptance of the status quo everywhere else in Europe east of the river Elbe.

The second round, which has been centered on the security conference and the supposedly parallel negotiations in Vienna about cutting the NATO and Warsaw pact armies (and whatever happened to those?), has also gone well for Leonid Brezhnev.

The third round is now starting. The hope that detente might yet begin to justify the optimists' original expectations depends on two theories about its possible long-term effects on Brezhnev's empire. They are the Gulliverization theory, and the colanderization one.

The Gulliverization theory is Henry Kissinger's belief that it is worth while signing a whole series of agreements with Russia, even if the Russians for the moment get more out of them than the West does, because this will make future Soviet governments decide that their relationship with the West is too valuable to break. Like Gulliver with the Lilliputians, the theory runs, they will be bound down by a mesh of tiny threads.

they are, compares with the huge concession of principle the West has made.

The wood that lies behind the trees is the West's explicit acceptance of the new frontiers the Russians drew all over Eastern Europe in 1940 and 1945, and its implicit acceptance of the post-1945 ideological division of Europe in 1940 and 1945, and its implicit acceptance of the post-1945 ideological division of Europe.

President Ford suggested, when he set out for the Helsinki meeting, that the West is not recognizing the way the Russians pushed their borders westward a generation ago. That is not so:

Article 3 of the first section of the Helsinki document says that all the countries signing it regard each other's existing frontiers as inviolable.

The document's defenders also say that it is not tantamount to a peace treaty winding up the Second World War. That is not really true either. It falls short of being a peace treaty only in the sense that none of

The proper question to ask about any supposed achievement of detente is: "How do you measure it?" The most obvious thing about the Helsinki statement is the total lack of yardsticks to measure what the Russians and the other communist states of Eastern Europe are supposed to have committed themselves to doing. They say they will "make it their aim" to "facilitate freer movement and contacts ... among persons, institutions and organizations" in all 35 countries. What facilities? By when will that aim become reality?

They will "examine favorably" applications by those of their citizens who want to marry someone in the West. What happens if and when the citizen still gets the answer no? They intend "gradually to simplify ... the procedures for exit" from their countries. Does that mean a Pole or Hungarian—to take the two most liberal countries in Eastern Europe—can one day count on being able to go on holiday in the West, without having to leave his children behind, as routinely as a Westerner planning a holiday in the West?

Those are the hard questions, and the Helsinki declaration provides no answers.

Privacy, law, computer

Aside from all its other implications, the Rockefeller Commission's report on illegal activities by the Central Intelligence Agency has given new urgency to the "privacy issue."

This is something that concerns every citizen, for few of us do not have our names, ranks (income, education, etc.) and serial numbers (Social Security, driver's license, etc.) stored in a myriad of government and private files.

So far, the only major legislation in this area, the Privacy Act of 1974, deals solely with government-compiled information. However, a broad-coverage bill has been introduced in the House of Representatives that would do for the private sector what the Privacy Act did for the public sector.

Commenting on the proposed legislation, Dale H. Learn, president of Information Science, Inc., which claims to be the nation's leading designer of "human resources systems," notes that legislation is clearly required to insure that the privacy of the individual is not transgressed and to prevent the unauthorized and unwarranted use or dissemination of employee data. He suggests two ways this could be done:

1) By setting up tight security systems for keeping files under lock and key, whether they are computerized or manual.

2) By permitting employees to see the information in their files so that they may review, question and correct it if need be.

But as for the widespread impression—or fear—that a lot of the personal information contained in corporate and business files is unnecessary and irrelevant, if not downright false, Learn's experience has been that this is not so.

In the 10 years his company has been designing employee information systems for many of the nation's largest corporations, he has never, he says, been asked to include such data as political activities, standing with the Internal Revenue Service, credit ratings or the like. On the contrary, the information kept on employees is relevant to the jobs they hold and is "employee originated" for the most part.

The computer, Learn contends, may actually be the key to the "personalization" of society. "The computer will enable the movement away from treating citizens and employees in impersonal mass groups and back toward the individual assessment on the basis of qualifications, capabilities and preferences."

There is a need to prevent erroneous information from being immortalized in the computer, he admits, but the collection and use of employee information have little if anything to do with the right to privacy as long as appropriate security measures are observed.

Ford in Nelson's future?

WASHINGTON (LENS)—When President Ford set up his election campaign office last month, Vice President Rockefeller lost no time in remarking: "I am not a candidate; have you ever heard of anyone running for vice president?"

As a matter of fact, people have been known to campaign openly for the vice-presidential nomination, if only in the Democratic party where pretty well anything is permitted. Nothing comes of such open campaigns because, in nearly every set of circumstances, a vice-presidential candidate needs only one vote, that of the nominee for president, to whose choice the national party convention must, almost inevitably, defer.

In that sense Rockefeller was right, but there are other ways of running for vice president, as Hubert Humphrey demonstrated in 1964 when the choice was up to President Lyndon Johnson. Humphrey's problem was to convince the sole elector, Johnson, that choosing Humphrey would be the best thing for the party, the campaign, the administration and the president's personal happiness and peace of mind.

This was a delicate operation, needing no brass bands of booster demonstrations, but the president was duly convinced and chose Humphrey, not without keeping the suspense up until the end. It is, of course, a method that can work only when the identity of the presidential nominee is known in advance of the nominating convention.

Just such a case has come to pass through the replacement of Mr. Nixon, who would not have been eligible to succeed himself again, by Mr. Ford, who is eligible and running. President Ford will be the Republican candidate next year, barring some strange and unexpected turn of events.

It seems inevitable, therefore, that he will find himself in possession of the single vote for the Republican vice presidential candidate. He could choose not to exercise it, and leave the party's national convention to fight the matter out; that would be unusual, and risky.

He could foreclose the question by announcing his choice in advance, but why should he do that? It would not help his own nomination. If his nomination needed any help, which it does not, the man most likely to help him to be nominated would probably not be the right one to help him to get elected, simply because the party is not the country.

What Mr. Ford has done is to say that while he entirely approved of his vice president and was "for" his nomination, he and Rockefeller would campaign on their own and the decision would be up to the delegates.

If Rockefeller were to take these words literally and act upon them by running a separate public campaign for himself, he would be more likely to damage his chances than to help them. Presidents do not want vice presidents thrust upon them; a vice president who did manage to thrust himself, if that were possible, would quickly find his official life not worth living.

For Rockefeller, in addition, life as a private person holds no great terrors thanks to an abundance of wealth, position, influence, interests, health and vigor that is unusual in vice presidents.

If he stays, he wants to stay because he is wanted; were he to leave, he would want to leave gracefully trailing the perfume of success.

Plainly Rockefeller's campaign has to be of the private kind, designed to sustain Mr. Ford's conviction of his usefulness in office and value in the national election, while disarming opposition within the Republican party that might, if strong enough, make him an awkward man to nominate. These are perfectly feasible aims.

His chief difficulty with the party is that his connections and his popularity tend to be confined to the East Coast together with a few populous states like Ohio, Michigan and California.

Even elsewhere, however, the party is not riding so high that it can dispense with a potentate like the vice president to give importance to its gatherings and boost its fundraising. The provisions of the new campaign finance law make it particularly necessary to raise whatever campaign money can be raised for general party (not presidential) use before the end of this year.

Disclaimer campaigning as he may, Rockefeller has already found it necessary to remind his party that it is not going to retain the presidency without "people who can appeal to more than just Republicans," that is, without people like himself. Mr. Ford's new campaign staff introduced itself to the world in language suggesting that the unity of the Republican party ("18 per cent of the country," retorted the vice president on the way to Cincinnati on July 22) was what mattered, and that Rockefeller might be in its way.

Ford's campaign chairman is Howard Callaway, an amiable, rich, public-spirited conservative Republican from Georgia, to whom the mood of the deep South looms large and the chief threat to Mr. Ford's reelection appears to be his right-wing rival, Ronald Reagan.

His first concern is a smooth Republican national convention next year. To secure that, he set out to appease the southern politicians who might otherwise be listening to Reagan as a possible rival to Ford, and for that purpose he wanted the greatest possible distance between Ford and the vice president.

"I'm not going to alienate persons who don't want Rockefeller," said Callaway on introducing the press to his austere new campaign offices. Two weeks later he was saying that what would help Ford's nomination would be for Rockefeller to withdraw as vice-presidential candidate, and that other wise the unpopularity of Rockefeller in the South would help Reagan to maintain his lead over President Ford in the southern states.

Rather pointedly the president's spokesman refused at the time to dissociate himself from Callaway's remarks. By last week, however, common sense had begun to break through and Callaway was persuaded to suggest that his remarks had been taken out of context and that the Reagan opposition, not he, had been casting aspersions on Rockefeller's political usefulness.

Unless Callaway has been firmly told to concern himself entirely with organizing the Republican party behind Ford without regard to whether the country elects Ford or not, then he has a lot to learn about the national political outlook.

When it comes to the general election, the approval or disapproval of the Republican right wing and of Reagan will barely affect Ford's chances in the South at all. Ford will do badly in the South if George Wallace is a presidential candidate, and well if he is not.

While this little effort to depreciate the Rockefeller stock has been totally without effect on Ford's standing in the southern states one way or the other, it has aroused predictable grumbling from Republican moderates in states like Pennsylvania, Illinois and New York, where Rockefeller's presence on the ballot sheet can actually do Ford some good in the general election.

Congressman William Cohen, a young Republican from Maine, put it evocatively when he said he would like to hear less about the President's "full confidence" in the vice president "while campaign surrogates erect a gallows upon which Rockefeller can twist slowly, slowly, in the wind."

To that poisonous phrase Cohen added another, "a thousand percent support," recalling Senator McGovern's foolish handling of his vice-presidential choice: a severe reminder, but a salutary one.

McWethy-Albert exchange vows

St. Paul's Lutheran Church, was the setting for the wedding of Miss Rebecca Ann McWethy, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert McWethy, and Patrick R. Albert, son of Mrs. James Albert and the late Mr. Albert.

The Rev. William Swarbrick conducted the afternoon nuptial service. Pastor and Mrs. Robert Wurtz served as organist and vocalist.

Escorted to the altar by her father, the bride wore a traditional floor-length gown of imported silk organza trimmed with hand clipped Chantilly lace. Her gown featured a scalloped V-neckline, bishop sleeves, empire waistline, and a train with a built-in chapel sweep. A Camelot bonnet of matching Chantilly lace touched with seed pearls held her triple tiered veil of illusion. She carried a bouquet of white daisies and carnations, pink sweetheart roses and baby's breath.

Miss Susan McWethy was her sister's maid of honor. She was attired in an aqua floor-length double knit dress with pin straps and matching long-sleeved jacket edged with lace. Her white picture hat was trimmed with ribbon matching her dress.

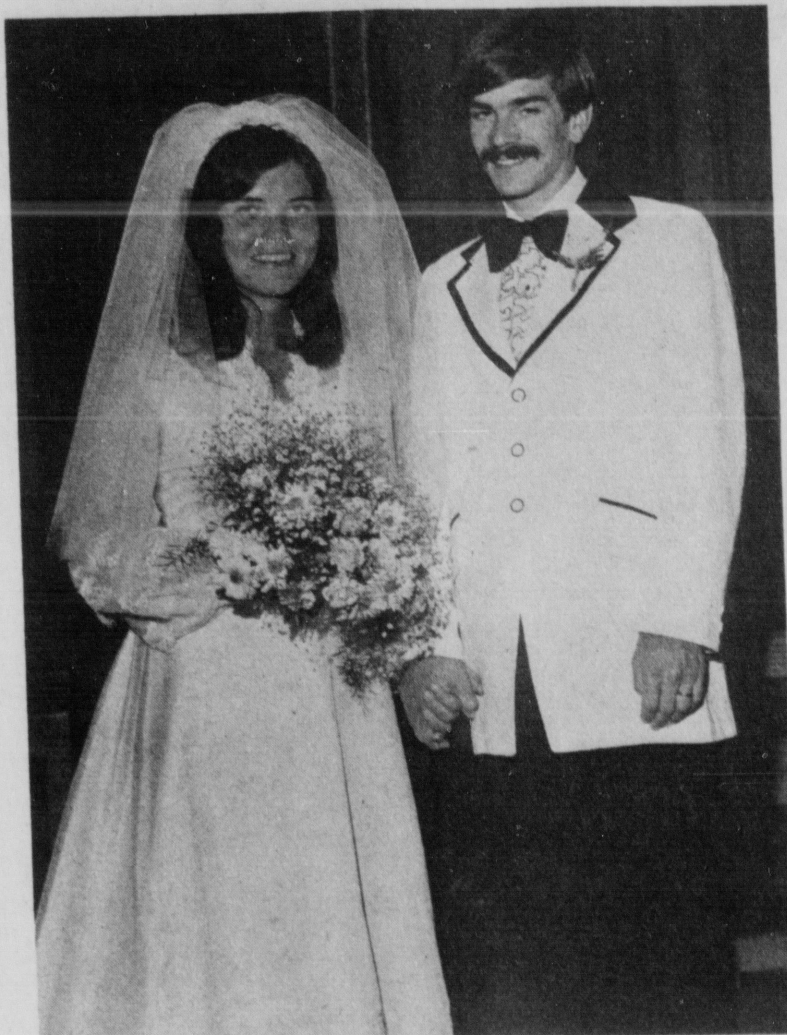

Bridesmaids were Miss Denise Tuscany, Brookfield, Wisc., and Miss Joane Brockman, Parkridge. Miss Tuscany wore a light green gown and Miss Brockman, pink, styled like the maid of honor's gown. Each of the attendants carried a bouquet of daisies, baby's breath and carnation tinted to match their dresses.

Michael Albert, Hawaii, was his brother's best man. Groomsmen were Glenn Swartz and Larry Smith, Dixon. Guests were seated by Steven and William McWethy, brother of the bride.

A reception was held in the Fellowship Hall following the ceremony. Mr. and Mrs. Carl Woessner, uncle and aunt of the bride, hosted the reception.

Mrs. Gary Meyers and Mrs. David Woessner, cousins of the bride, served the wedding cake. Coffee was poured by Miss Cassandra Rodgers and Miss Barbara Rodgers served punch. Debra Tourillo, cousin of the bride, registered guests.

Since their wedding trip to Wisconsin and Indiana, the new Mr. and Mrs. Albert have resided on Rt. 3, Polo.

She wore an ivory lace picture hat with a shoulder length veil and carried a bouquet of pink cymbidium orchids, white stephanotis, baby's breath and ivy.

Her maid of honor was Miss Sandy Mollin. Miss Judy Owens and Miss Shelly Schrader, cousin of the bride, were bridesmaids.

They wore floor-length gowns of green polyester crepe with sheer floral capelet collars. Their bouquets combined multi-colored pastel daisies and baby's breath. They wore pink daisies and baby's breath in their hair.

Best man was Roy Yarrington. Serving as groomsmen were Bill Provance and Tom Akers, brother of the groom. Ushers were Kirby Marine, the bride's brother, Paul Ackerman, step-brother of the bride, Dennis Ohlson and Ed Robinson.

Polly's Pointers

Polly's Problem

DEAR POLLY — I hope someone has an answer to my problem. Every time I bake cookies my pans turn up at one end. I wonder what causes this. — THERESA.

DEAR THERESA — I have no idea what causes your cookie sheets to turn up but hope someone else can come up with an answer for you. How about this, readers? — POLLY.

DEAR POLLY — My Pet Peeve concerns animals. Do not get the wrong idea and think I do not like them, for my concern is because I do love them. Why is it that so many who claim to love their pets fatten their poor dogs and cats so they have neither the strength nor ambition to drag their heavy bodies around? Is this love? I am thinking of a small dog who has trouble moving his huge body around one room and has to rest and can scarcely get his breath. I am sure a human being carrying an equal proportion of weight would weigh 500-600 pounds so my heart brags when I see these poor animals. It seems that if the owners really loved their pets they would limit their food intake and then have them with them longer. — A PET LOVER.

DEAR POLLY — Hanging plants are so much in vogue now, so I hung brass pots full of vines on my bird cage stand and they look lovely. The stand is easily moved from window to window and I am so glad I did not throw it away. Often it pays to keep old things as eventually we often find a good use for them. — MABEL.

DEAR POLLY — My Pointer is really a warning and sort of public service. It came as a surprise to me to hear that trash collectors have a higher injury rate than policemen or firemen. Have you ever watched those collectors grab the plastic bags we put out? Anything sharp such as broken glass or a can lid could cut an artery. PLEASE, let us all put can lids in the bottom of the cans they come off of and then press the tops together enough so the lids cannot fall out. Put broken or breakable glass and plastics into something protective. Empty milk cartons are good containers for such small things and can be easily taped shut. A corrugated box or extra heavy bags such as pet food comes in are good and can also be taped shut. If your trash collector is injured don't let it be your fault. — T. M.

DEAR T.M. — Thanks for reminding us of this danger. I am sure trash collectors will be most appreciative. Often we are careless just because of thoughtlessness. — POLLY.

DEAR POLLY — Keep a flashlight with a magnet near the sewing machine. When pins and needles fall on the floor they can be easily located with the light and then picked up with the magnet. This flashlight is also handy to use when cleaning and oiling the machine. — MRS. G.M.E. (Newspaper Enterprise Assn.)

By Oswald & James Jacoby
Probably the most elegant of all squeezes is the criss-cross. It doesn't come up too often, but when it does it is a thing of beauty.

North may have overbid a trifle when he bid four and five notrump, or maybe South shouldn't have jumped to seven. In any event the average bridge player would be unable to work out the 13th trick, since East was sitting right in back of dummy with all the clubs and diamonds.

The late Charles Lochridge, who played this hand some 35 years ago, had no trouble with it.

He won the heart and promptly cashed four trumps. East discarded a club and a heart. Then Charley led the second high heart. He chucked a diamond from dummy and East chucked a diamond right in back.

By this time Charley was so sure that East was sitting with three diamonds and four clubs that he led a fifth trump, discarded dummy's last low diamond and showed his hand.

He explained that if East threw another diamond, he would cash dummy's ace-kings of both minor suits, criss-cross back to his hand by ruffing a club and make the last trick with his eight of diamonds. 9 (Newspaper Enterprise Assn.)

Dear Ann by Ann Landers

Dear Ann Landers: Regarding the husband who had to look elsewhere because his wife was "too tired, too busy, or not in the mood": I was interested in your cop-out response that "many women have the same complaint and isn't it a shame they can't reshuffle the deck and put the too tired, too busy and out-of-the-mooders together." Try this for size:

A fifth grader got up in English class and said, "In the U.S., a man can have only one wife at a time. This is called monogamy."

From the mouths of babes, maybe? — A Philosopher

Dear Phil: I'm sure it's monotony for many, but it doesn't need to be if at least one person has imagination and cares enough to keep the physical side of marriage exciting.

Nothing lasts, including sexual excitement, unless you work at it.

Dear Ann Landers: I am 13 years old and am writing this letter not only for myself but for my four younger brothers and sisters. They are 11, 10, 9, and 6.

Our parents don't miss a night to fight. We are fed up with the yelling and screaming and name-calling, door-slaming and plate-throwing.

Dad works hard and is a great guy. The minute he walks in the door Mom hits him with a list of complaints. He tells her to shut up and then the battle is on.

After the fight is over, Mom cries and says Dad doesn't love her. She is wrong. He loves her a lot. But if he didn't, would you blame him? Who wants to get chewed out all the time?

Please help us straighten these two out. We don't want our family split, but this is no way to live. — Five Unhappy

Kids

Dear Kids: I hope every pair of battling parents who sees your letter will pretend it was written by their children. (Too bad you were so explicit about your number and ages.)

Your mom and dad need a third party to sit down with them, listen to the complaints from both sides and set up some House Rules. This means counseling.

There are many places they can go — The Salvation Army, YMCA, to their clergyman, Catholic Charities, or to the county or state mental health society. Please show them this column and tell them I hope they get moving.

Dear Ann Landers: I took a job as a telephone operator four months ago and it has been an education in human behavior. I had no idea there were so many crazy, stupid, rude and downright foul-mouthed people in the world.

I've been asked how to get gum out of a kid's hair, how many eggs to put in a sponge cake, what to do about cockroaches and a dog who snores.

When I have been unable to find a number because the person doesn't know how to spell the name or give any clue to the address, I've been cussed out in language I wouldn't write and you couldn't print.

I hope you will print this letter so the public will get wise to itself and have some consideration for us telephone employees who are trying to earn a living, like anyone else. — Blistered Ears

Dear Ears: Don't expect miracles. "The public is 'people' and it takes all kinds to make a world."

Chicagoans win $2.2 million in lottery

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (AP) — Chicagoans have taken home the top three prizes on the first anniversary of the Illinois State Lottery in special simultaneous drawings in Chicago and Springfield.

Some $2.2 million was given away in three drawings Thursday and Friday.

In Springfield Friday night, Jaes H. Johnson of Chicago won the $1 million grand prize, and Edward Dusza of Chicago was the $100,000 second place winner. The drawing took place in front of the grandstand at the Illinois State Fair.

Meanwhile, in Chicago, 39-year-old Odis Norris of Chicago won $1,000 a month for life in the Super Slam game.

Johnson, also 39, works as a printer for the Garden City Envelope Co. He leaped to his feet and cried, "I won. I won," after the drawing.

When asked what he would do with his money, the new millionaire said, "I'll try to decorate the house a little bit" and take a vacation.

But his wife of 23 years had more practical things in mind. Lulah Johnson, 38, said, "I'm going to send the kids to a special trade school."

The couple have three sons aged 18, 20 and 22.

Johnson said he buys eight to 10 lottery tickets a week. He said he had accumulated $160 in prize money in the year he has played the game.

The Johnsons will receive $50,000 a year for the next 20 years.

Dusza, 59, the $100,000 winner, said he would retire from his job at the Chicago Post Office, where he has worked for 37 years.

The $10,000 winners in Springfield were Linda Brady, Chicago; William Coggins, Flo-

The way it was Aug. 9, 1974

(EDITOR'S NOTE: Writer remembers one year ago today when Nixon left the White House.)

By JUDY SCHMIDT

The monotonous drone of a buzz saw is a disturbing sound. So, usually, is its function. Early this morning a Chinese Elm of 27 years standing was mechanically and methodically dismantled, limb by limb. This tree, a resident of my neighbors' parkway for nearly three decades, had been picked and planted by the lady herself.

Watered, nurtured and prodded, it was encouraged to grow to a stately size. It struggled to amount to something and serve a useful purpose. And it did.

Spreading wide its young brown arms, it offered the birds and squirrels a home, provided shade for the neighbors and made memories for the lady next door.

Years of effort had made it just about the biggest thing around. It towered over the houses, the street, the cars and the people.

The children played games around it and the dogs took it for granted but it never flinched. Despite its exalted position, it remained humble.

The only thing bigger than the Chinese Elm was the wind. Not just one small breeze, of course, but a combination of all small breezes everywhere joining together with such great volume and gusto that their force is ineffable and incredible.

When the tree was smaller only tiny breezes knew when it got in their way or they had to go around it. As its size increased it agitated even the stronger breezes.

The tree was stubborn and held its ground when the breezes batted it around. At full maturity it was an indiscriminate nuisance. It made the wind pretty damn mad!

So, one day the wind decided it was time for a confrontation. They sky wasn't big enough for a Chinese Elm and the wind both. The tree chose to ignore several windy challenges. Then a powerful storm was projected with great threatening roars of thunder. Lightning struck. The first branch fell to the ground.

Afterward the neighbors hauled the branch out to the curb-stone for the city to pick up and dispose of. They had a little more respect for that giant of a tree's endurance.

The tree nursed its own wound but proposed no treaties with the wind. It would have its way.

The second storm was worse and the wind hurled two more branches to the ground. One blocked a driveway and one crushed new cornstalks in a vegetable garden.

Now the people didn't think of the 27 years of shade and memories and birds nests. Instead they felt a little mad about not being able to get the car in during the hail that followed. They also blamed the tree for the power failure that came next when another branch blew off. The neighbors worried about future damage the tree would cause and respect was shrouded with fear. The wind laughed heartily.

Then came the final storm and the tree tossed its biggest branch right up on the lawn of the lady who planted it.

The lady was genuinely and rightfully frightened and the neighbors agreed that the tree had to go. It was a hazard and would, no doubt, come crashing down on someone's head or roof. The people and the wind agreed—it had to go.

The Chinese Elm felt sad and somewhat perplexed. What had it done besides throw a few branches around?? Limb by limb the buzz saw and the city tree trimmers cut and hacked and sawed away until all that was left was the stump of a Chinese Elm. They piled the logs and the memories on a truck and slowly drove away. Wood chips and bird feathers lay in the grass and millions of breezes hovered over the stump, aimed menacingly at my now-exposed kitchen window.

On television, my son was watching President Nixon's farewell speech. He said "You destroy yourself when you hate your enemies back." The wind seemed stronger. He walked across the White House lawn and said good-bye to Gerald Ford. He said he'd remember the people in his prayers. Mr. Nixon and his memories were loaded into a helicopter and slowly flew away.

Millions of breezes chased along behind.

There seems an element of sadness this morning, in both departures.

Recruits tell of beatings

NORTH CHICAGO, Ill. (AP) — Three former Navy recruits have testified that they witnessed physical abuse of another recruit, Steven Stawnych, 18, at the Great Lakes Naval Training Center.

Scott A. Jaynes, a prisoner in the center's brig when the alleged beatings occurred there on May 12 and 13, testified Friday in the second day of a court martial of one guard.

Stawnych of White Bear Lake, Minn., had been confined in the lockup for being absent without leave and later committed suicide.

Jaynes of Carthage, Mo., who since has been discharged from the Navy, was the first prosecution witness in the trial of Marine Cpl. William T. Mason, 22, of Somerville, Mass. Mason had pleaded innocent before the presiding judge, Capt. Horace H. Morgan.

The prosecution contends that mistreatment in the brig drove Stawnych to such despondency he committed suicide when he threw himself before a train.

Other defendants are Sgt. Michael Williams, 23, of Moorhead, Minn., and Cpl. Nebjosa Popovich, 22, of Grayslake, Ill. They will be tried after Mason.

Fred CARLSON OF Griffith, Ind., also an inmate at the time of the alleged beating, testified he saw Mason push Stawnych's head against an opening at the bottom of a bed. He also said he saw Mason kneel Stawnych in the face.

Congressmen join 'Jet Set' at taxpayer's expense

WASHINGTON (AP) — In the name of detente and at the taxpayers' expense, several House and Senate delegations are traveling abroad during the August recess.

The range of trips being taken by members this month include swings into France, the Soviet Union, Romania, England, Germany, Saipan, Cuba, the People's Republic of China, Italy and Switzerland.

Congressional critics call these foreign trips "junks" because most expenses are paid by the congressional committees which arranged them. Defenders of the trips say members will gain knowledge about the nations being visited.

The delegations usually receive red-carpet treatment from foreign leaders who hope to woo them into looking at their country favorably.

It's the usual practice for spouses to go along, but members must pay for their spouses' expenses. Congressional funds, however, pay for committee counsels or other official aides in the party.

After returning home, they will write newsletters and hold news conferences to tell things they learned about the foreign mood, military hardware, waterways, banks, food supplies and what those other nations think of Americans.

One of the most ambitious trips is the current visit by 19 House members to the Soviet Union, Romania and Yugoslavia. Headed by Speaker Carl Albert, D-Okla., the members are meeting with government leaders and visiting industrial and agricultural sites.

"In the wake of the Apollo-Soyuz space mission and the Helsinki Treaty we have a unique opportunity to contribute to the easing of tensions and the goal of world peace which we all share," said traveler Robert H. Michel, R-Ill.

Michel also said he intends to gain insights into U.S. grain sales to the Soviets — "We want hard dollars and good prices for our products and I hope on my return to be satisfied that will be the case."

Besides Albert and Michel, others in the group include Armed Services Committee Chairman Melvin Price, D-Ill., Clement J. Zablocki, D-Wis., Edward P. Boland, D-Mass., Phil M. Landrum, D-Ga., John Brademas, D-Ind., Delbert L. Latta, R-Ohio, James H. Quillen, R-Tenn., Phillip Burton D-Calif., William J. Green, D-Pa., Sidney Yates, D-Ill., Tim Lee Carter, R-Ky., Agriculture Committee Chairman Thomas S. Foley, D-Wash., Tom Beville, D-Ala., Marvin L. Esch, R-Mich., Bill Archer, R-Tex., George E. Danielson, D-Calif., and Millicent Fenwick, R-N.J.

In other trips, Reps. William C. Wampler, R-Va., ranking minority member on agriculture, and W. R. Poage, D-Tex., chairman of the livestock and grains subcommittee, are planning a two-week excursion to Moscow, Leningrad, eastern Russia and Mongolia to study agriculture conditions. They will be accompanied by two staff aides.

House Armed Services member William L. Dickinson, R-Ala., and two committee aides are on a week-long inspection of Cuba, the U.S. naval base at Guantanamo Bay and military installations in the Panama Canal Zone.

Another Armed Services delegation will go to Saipan and Tinian to inspect properties that would be leased to the United States for defense under the covenant approved by the House establishing the Northern Marianas as a U.S. commonwealth. That group consist of Reps. Charles H. Wilson, D-Calif., and Mendel J. Davis, D-S.C., and Del. Antonio B. Won Pat, D-Guam, all members of the military installations and facilities subcommittee.

The People's Republic of China is being visited for two weeks by a joint Senate-House group: Sens. Charles H. Percy, R-Ill., Claiborne Pell, D-R.I., Jacob K. Javits, R-N.Y., and Adlai E. Stevenson, D-Ill., and Reps. Margaret M. Heckler, R-Mass., Paul Findley, R-Ill., and Paul N. McCloskey Jr., R-Calif.

Merchant Marine and Fisheries Chairman Leonor K. Sullivan, D-Mo., and the panel's chief counsel are on a two-week trip to Germany and London to study waterways and harbor traffic systems.

On the Science and Technology Committee, Rep. Louis Frey Jr., R-Fla., is visiting space facilities in Paris and the European Center for Nuclear Research near Geneva.

Rep. John Jarman, R-Okla., is the appointed member of the interparliamentary union group holding a conference in London. He also will be stopping in Copenhagen, Oslo, Stockholm and Dublin. Guam, Manila, Australia and New Zealand are on the itinerary of Joshua Eilberg, D-Pa., chairman of judiciary's immigration, citizenship and international law subcommittee. Others on the two-week trip include Reps. Herman Badillo, D-N.Y., and Thomas F. Railsback, R-Ill. They are looking into programs dealing with refugees.

Chairman Fernand J. St. Germain, D-R. I., and members of the subcommittee on financial institutions supervision, regulation and insurance, are on a two-week trip to meet with officials of banks in England, France, Germany, Switzerland and Italy.

They are gathering information on international banking for pending legislation on foreign bank operations in the United States.

St. Germain said this is his first overseas trip during his 15 years in Congress. Identities of those with St. Germain were not available from either the Banking subcommittee or St. Germain's office.

One of the most unusual trips — paid for by the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration — was taken by scuba diver Rep. William Alexander, D-Ark., of the Appropriations Committee and Sen. Lowell P. Weicker Jr., R-Conn., of the Commerce Committee's oceanographic panel.

They spent three days in an underwater research laboratory in the Atlantic off Freeport in the Bahamas. Weicker said afterwards that Congress needs to set a higher priority for ocean research.

People in the news

TREMSBUETTEL, West German (AP) — Heart surgeon Michael DeBakey has invited film stars and royalty to his wedding in this village near his bride's hometown.

The 67-year-old DeBakey and 32-year-old actress was Feb. 1973. The wedding ceremony was held in a civil ceremony in the United States.

Ex-King Leopold of Belgium, actor Curt Jurgens and singer Frank Sinatra are among those invited to the reception in the century Tremsbuettel castle, which has been converted into a luxury hotel.

It was the second marriage for the surgeon from Texas, who has four grown sons. His first wife died and he met Miss Fehlbauer two years later at a cocktail party in Houston in 1973.

NEW LONDON, Conn. (AP) — Gov. and Mrs. Robert F. Bennett plan a private party at the governor's mansion for President Ford's daughter, Susan, on Sunday. About 50 persons have been invited to the outdoor barbecue. Miss Ford is staying here while working at her summer newspaper job.

TEXARKANA, Ark. (AP) — Rep. Wilbur D. Mills, still recovering from a five-month bout with alcoholism, faces a trial Aug. 22 that could result in his ouster from the House. Grand Master J. Lee Overstreet said the proceedings were brought because of Mills' drinking and escapades with stripper Fanne Foxe.

"I can't talk to you about it, I just can't talk to you about it," said Mills, a 32nd degree Mason. "I'll tell you all about it after it's over."

Mills, 66, former House Ways and Means Committee chairman, returned to Congress in May after being hospitalized for treatment of alcoholism.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Theodore Knight Jr., 20-year-old son of actor Ted Knight, has been arraigned along with a companion on charges of burglary and receiving stolen property.

Young Knight and Howard Klein, 21, were arrested last week and charged in a break-in at the offices of a Woodland Hills dentist.

VAN NUYS Municipal Court Judge Richard A. Merian scheduled a preliminary hearing for Sept. 16. Defendants are free on $1,000 bond.

Police said officers were led to Klein's apartment by a neighbor who reported seeing someone moving a heavy object inside.

The Doctor Says:

By Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.
DEAR DR. LAMB — Would you kindly discuss the effects of smoking on an arthritic person? I feel there is some sort of link between the two and feel if you confirmed this maybe it would help people give up smoking. I know a woman in her 70s who is bothered with painful arthritis, but while complaining about it continues with her cigarettes.

DEAR READER — Cigarettes are associated with a lot of ills, but there is no evidence that they cause or make arthritis worse.

There is some evidence that patients with rheumatoid arthritis are particularly prone to develop lung disease from smoking, much more so than the average smoker and that is bad enough already.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I am so angry at myself for being so dumb. I had two gall bladder attacks, so I called my obstetrician. He is the only doctor I have had since my only problem has been having six babies. He sent me to a friend of his, an internist. I had tests, and three days later he said he radiologist's report said I had gall stones, and should go see a surgeon. He sent me to a surgeon friend of his because he doesn't operate.

Now why didn't I know that and go to a surgeon in the first place? I suppose all this running around is so everybody can get a bite out of my Blue Cross Blue Shield! I want you to tell me of the following list of specialists do surgery and which ones don't, for future use.

DEAR READER — Forgive me for not including your list, but you are using poor judgment. Think how angry you would be with yourself if you had gone to a surgeon and found out that your problem was not gall bladder disease. Then you would have seen a surgeon for no reason at all and would still have the problem which would require an internist.

Your obstetrician was right in sending you to an internist first. The diagnosis could have been several different things, including an ulcer or hiatal hernia or colon problems. The internist has to hear the symptoms and do an examination to make a correct diagnosis. The X rays help, but many people have stones and have symptoms from something else, such as a spastic colon.

Except in those small communities where the surgeon does family practice as well as some surgery, I recommend that all patients see their family physician first or an internist before seeing a surgeon.

The exception is for injuries, as from an automobile accident, the internist has to see a nature as to require a surgeon.

A good surgeon really is too busy to sort through all the medical complaints that may not require surgery at all. That is why he limits his practice to surgery. A surgeon who is too enthusiastic about surgery, and there are some, often has his enthusiasm controlled by the internist who doesn't do surgery.

Finally, many patients who require surgery also have medical problems that need the skills of the family physician or the internist, in addition to surgery.

Disney plans lake

TRUCKEE, Calif. (AP) — Walt Disney Productions, stymied in its dream of a year-round resort high in the Sierra mountains, has set its sights on a small man-made lake near the California-Nevada border.

Independence Lake, serene in the shadow of 9,143-foot Mt. Lola, will be the site of Disney's latest family "destination" resort, if local authorities approve.

Plans for the facility 192 miles east of San Francisco and 50 miles west of Reno, Nev., were outlined recently at a meeting for county supervisors and local planners.

Disney will build the resort on 10,000 acres, of which less than 10 per cent will be developed. The rest will remain in its natural state.

Included will be a pedestrian-oriented village, a 275-room lodge, underground parking, condominiums, shops, an electric-coop railway, a mountain restaurant and a variety of outdoor recreation activities, including skiing, hiking, camping and fishing. It will handle nearly 3,000 overnight visitors and 5,000 skiers each weekend day.

The project is similar to one derailed by environmentalists at Mineral King, a narrow, two-mile-long valley 7,800 feet up in Sequoia National Forest of Central California.

The Mineral King development would have included an "American alpine village," several restaurants, shops, convention facilities and outdoor sports activities.

The Mineral King project drew opposition from environmentalists, led by the Sierra Club, which filed a suit in 1969. The court battle snarled Disney's plans.

Disney spokesmen say they haven't really given up on Mineral King, but say it will have to wait until Independence Lake is finished, probably in 1978.

"We do not see Independence Lake as a substitute for Mineral King," said a Disney spokesman. He said the attractions are aimed at different users.

Disney conceived Mineral King as a destination resort for the millions of Southern Californians who already have easy access to Disneyland in Anaheim. Independence Lake was designed for visitors from Northern California and the Pacific Northwest.

Specific figures on money investment are not available, officials say, because of the early stages of the development. The Mineral King project was to have cost $35 million in the late 1960s.

Sox lose; Cubs split

CHICAGO (AP) — Don Baylor has yet to hit .300 in a season or reach the 20-homer plateau but Manager Earl Weaver of the Baltimore Orioles says his left fielder has a shot at being the American League's Most Valuable Player.

Baylor, who has had some fantastic streaks in the past, currently is on another binge and the Orioles as a result are riding the crest of a six-game winning streak.

Baylor batted out two hits, walked twice, stole two bases and scored twice Friday night in leading the Orioles to a 7-4 victory over the Chicago White Sox. He now has had 17 hits in his last 24 times at bat for a .708 clip.

"You just can't expect anyone to keep up that kind of pace," pleaded Weaver, who after some prodding said, "Okay, if he can keep up that pace the rest of the season, then Boston just might have to win all its games."

The Orioles pulled within six games of Boston in the American League East when the Red Sox dropped a 3-2 decision to Oakland Friday night.

A year ago the Red Sox led Baltimore by eight games late in August and the Orioles not only passed them but finished eight games in front of the Red Sox.

Such collapse, however, is not expected this year—not even by Baylor.

"If we can get within two or three games of Boston in September, we'll win it," vowed Baylor. "We're used to coming from behind. We did it in 1973 and again last year. We'll win our share but it all depends on what Boston does."

Baylor, who has 17 home runs, hiked his average to .290. But he doesn't feel he has hit the peak he hit during the month of August in 1973.

"That was the best month I've ever had," said Baylor. "I hit .455 that month. Last year I had a good September when I hit .385. Of course, this streak isn't over yet."

It should be mentioned that when Baylor hit .455 in August of 1973, the Orioles put together a 14-game winning streak and when he was rolling last September they won 10 in a row.

Currently they've won six straight and are counting while Baylor is clipping along at a .700 pace.

"He's a great player and the most underrated in the game," said White Sox Manager Chuck Tanner. "He's got upper-deck power, he's a good hitter and he has above average speed. He wasn't even mentioned for the All-Star game and he certainly belongs with any three outfielders in the league."

Baylor singled to keep the Orioles alive in the first inning when Bobby Grich singled home a run Friday night. He then doubled home a run and scored on a single by Lee May to put the Orioles ahead to stay 3-1 in the third inning.

After Dave Duncan homered in the sixth to give Baltimore a 4-2 lead, the Sox closed the gap with a run in the seventh.

Baylor walked to open the eighth, stole second and went to third on a throwing error. Lee May followed with a run-scoring single and Ken Singleton drove in two more with a single to clinch the triumph.

Baylor also walked and stole another base in the ninth to keep the Sox groggy.

The two teams meet again tonight with Claude Osteen, 6-10, pitching for the Sox against Baltimore ace Jim Palmer, 16-7.

ATLANTA (AP) — Gene Hissler figured he had the advantage all along.

The Chicago Cubs outfielder said, "Fortunately I was up with men on base and neither their pitcher nor their catcher knew much about me. I figured I had the edge."

Hissler lashed a single through the middle off Bruce Dal Canton, driving in the go-ahead run as the Cubs trimmed the Atlanta Braves 3-1 Friday night to gain a split in a two-night doubleheader.

Atlanta won the opener 1-0 on Carl Morton's brilliant five-hit.

Hissler, who returned from a stint in the minor leagues a few weeks ago, also destroyed the Braves with his glove. He robbed Darrell Evans of a possible bases-loaded hit to left with a sliding catch about knee-high.

Dal Canton was working on a three-hit shutout in the seventh when Steve Swisher started his downfall by reaching second on Evans' two-base throwing error.

The Cubs got even on John Summers' sacrifice fly, went in front on Hissler's hit and added another in the ninth when Rick Monday scored from second on Jerry Morales' infield single.

"This was really a good one for us," said Cubs Manager Jim Marshall. "We've been in a lot of close games this year. Now we're creeping up on improving our record over last year, and that's what we want to do."

Morton was impressive in the opener even though the Braves' hurler complained about his fast ball.

"I just didn't have any real good velocity," he said. "But I'm pitching better now than ever."

Morton now has a 13-12 record for the year and has pitched 17 straight scoreless innings. He has a chance to win another one tonight without throwing a pitch.

The Braves and Cubs will complete an earlier suspended game in which Morton gave the Braves a 6-2 lead through eight innings. Teammate Phil Niekro will try to preserve that victory by working the final inning and then starting the regularly scheduled game.

The only run in the opener came on Earl Williams infield ground out, scoring Ralph Garr, who had doubled, in the first inning.

Murtaugh unconcerned

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON

AP Sports Writer

Danny Murtaugh isn't concerned with the second-place Philadelphia Phillies. He's got enough to worry about these days the way his Pittsburgh Pirates are playing.

"I'm not worried about Philadelphia; I only worry about my own club," Murtaugh said Friday night after the Pirates dropped a 5-3 decision to the lowly Houston Astros. Coupled with Philadelphia's 5-4 triumph over the San Francisco Giants, it sliced the Pirates' lead over the Phillies in the National League's East Division to three games, their smallest margin since June 29.

Elsewhere, the Los Angeles Dodgers edged the New York Mets 4-3, the St. Louis Cardinals outlasted the San Diego Padres 10-6, the Montreal Expos nipped the Cincinnati Reds 8-7 and the Chicago Cubs downed the Atlanta Braves 3-1 after dropping the doubleheader opener 1-0.

Right-hander Dock Ellis was staked to a quick 3-0 lead on Dave Parker's homer but last-ed only two-thirds of an inning, allowing four hits, including RBI singles by Cliff Johnson and Milt May. The Astros tied it in the second and won it with two runs off reliever Kent Tekulve in the third on doubles by Greg Gross and Johnson and Doug Rader's single.

Phillies 5, Giants 4

Dick Allen singled home the winning run in the ninth inning after Garry Maddox beat out a one-out infield single, stole second and went to third on reliever Randy Moffitt's wild pickoff throw. Greg Luzinski walked before Allen's game-winning hit.

The Giants tied the game 4-4 on Willie Montanez' three-run homer in the eighth off Tom Underwood. Luzinski drove in two runs with his 28th homer and a sacrifice fly. Dodgers 4, Mets 3

Ron Cey brought Los Angeles from behind with a two-run single off reliever Ken Sanders in the eighth inning. Jimmy Wynn and Steve Garvey, who accounted for the Dodgers' first two runs with solo homers, singled and Willie Crawford sacrificed before Cey's hit. Cardinals 10, Padres 6

St. Louis jumped to a 4-0 lead on six straight singles to start the first inning against Dan Spillner and winning pitcher Bob Forsch hit his first major league homer, a two-run shot in the third. Forsch also singled and scored in the second.

The six first-inning hits were by Lou Brock, Willie Davis, Ron Fairly, Ted Simmons, Reggie Smith and Ted Sizemore.

GREG POLING, left, coach of the Montgomery Ward Ladies slo-pitch softball team, and store manager Dave Schaab display the third-place trophy the team received for the Dixon Park District's tournament. Ward's finished with a 2-5 regular season slate but then won three consecutive games for the third-place finish in the tournament.

Reggie hurls; Reggie slugs

By KEN RAPPOPORT

Give Reggie Jackson an inch—and he'll hit the ball a mile.

Reggie Cleveland made a pitch too good to the Oakland slugger in the seventh inning Friday night and Jackson homered with two out to break up a no-hitter and spark the Oakland A's to a 3-2 victory over the Boston Red Sox.

"The pressure really builds up when a guy's got a no-hitter going. If the score was 8-0, maybe I wouldn't feel so good about breaking it up. But when it's 2-0, we're still in the game—and I knew if we'd get it down to one run, we'd have a great chance. We're a great one-run club in our home park," said Jackson.

The A's were as good as Jackson's word. After he belted a line drive over the right-field fence, Billy Williams singled and then Gene Tenace walked a two-run homer to pull the A's through.

Until that rally, Cleveland had gone through 62-3 innings, allowing two baserunners—a walk and a hit batter.

In the other American League games, the Baltimore Orioles beat the Chicago White Sox 7-4; the New York Yankees nudged the California Angels 4-3; the Texas Rangers stopped the Milwaukee Brewers 6-4; the Minnesota Twins turned back the Detroit Tigers 3-1 and the Cleveland Indians nipped the Kansas City Royals 4-3.

Before the A's rallied, the Red Sox got a run off Ken Holtzman, 14-9, in the second inning on a double by Dwight Evans and a single by Rico

Petrocelli and scored another in the fifth with the help of an Oakland error.

Orioles 7, White Sox 4

Dave Duncan slugged his eighth home run and hot-hitting Don Baylor lashed a single and double to lead Baltimore over Chicago. The triumph was the sixth straight for the Orioles and moved them within six games of Boston in the American League East.

Yankees 4, Angels 3

Larry Gura stifled California on five hits while New York took advantage of four California errors to defeat the Angels and ailing Nolan Ryan. Despite hitting into six double plays, it was the Yankees' ninth victory in 11 games and sixth in eight starts since Billy Martin replaced Bill Virdon as manager last weekend.

Rangers 6, Brewers 4

Toby Harrah's two-run homer and a three-run pinch homer by Roy Howell sparked a five-run sixth inning, powering Texas over Milwaukee.

Milwaukee's Bill Travers, 4-7, who lost his seventh consecutive decision.

Twins 3, Tigers 1

Jim Hughes scattered seven hits and pitched Minnesota past Detroit, saddling the reeling Tigers with their 13th consecutive setback—tying the club record for futility. The losing streak matched the mark set by the 1920 Tigers and tied in 1953.

Indians 4, Royals 3

Oscar Gamble greeted Kansas City relief ace Doug Bird with a tie-breaking two-run homer in the eighth inning, powering Cleveland over the Royals.

MURRAY OLDERMAN

PRO CHARTS

LOS ANGELES RAMS

COACH'S OUTLOOK:

"With success," concedes Chuck Knox, "comes impatience." Rams are eager to make run for Super Bowl after winning two division, one conference crowns in his two years. "We've built a good base but have to correct little things. On six-inch line, goal-to-go vs. Minnesota, we get offside. That's a little thing."

OFFENSE

Receiving—Lack of speed conceded by signing pair of malcontents, Ron Jessie and Otto Stowe, as possible mate for Harold Jackson. They can fly. Means Jack Snow, Lance Rentzel really will be pressed to stick around. At tight end, no one's supplanting big, fine-blocking Bob Klein. Rating—good.

Running—Try ing to jack up speed quotient here, too, and the big surprise could be Cullen Bryant, the converted defensive back who showed flashes of brilliance. Lawrence McCutcheon always gains his 1,000 yards. And Jim Bertelson is a mighty capable, steady veteran. Rating—very good.

Line—Oldest, most vulnerable department on team. Already got rid of Ken Iman at center, giving job to Rich Saul. Among top draftees were tackle Doug France, guard Dennis Harrah. Also signed WFL's Al Oliver. Old-timers will retain starting jobs but expect some changes as season wears on. Rating—good.

Quarterback—Rams keep touting James Harris, but also insist young Ron Jaworski could be great one. The question: do you get to Super Bowl with prospects? Rating—fair.

DEFENSE

Line—Merlin Olsen's not ready to be phased out yet, though Rams picked Notre Dame's Mike Fanning first in draft. The other three up front—ends Jack Youngblood and Fred Dryer, tackle Larry Brooks, come off brilliant years. But 15-year-vet Merlin still plays like Hall-of-Famer. Rating—very good-to-excellent.

Linebacking—Have six top-notch returning hands, including last year's starters: Isiah Robertson, Ken Geddes on outside, Jack Reynolds in middle. Geddes main one facing challenge, from Jim Youngblood. They're all strong. Rating—very good.

Secondary—The corners are the vulnerable spots. Ernie McMillan's got to have better year. Rookie Monte Jackson will push old Charlie Stukes. Strong safety Dave Elmen-dorf's the solid man. Experts wonder how the Rams have been able to get by with relatively mediocre talent. Rating—fair.

Kicking—Another area of challenge. Got Tom Dempsey, Grant Guthrie to compete with David Ray as placekicker. Brag about Mike Burke's hang-time as punter, but not distance. Rating—fair-to-good.

SUM-UP:

No one has beaten Rams by more than 11 points over two seasons. They're especially young on defense. The only real question about them is offensive leadership at QB.

Prediction: first in NFC West.

Selling results from hard work

The Dodgers'-fans love

By MURRAY OLDERMAN

LOS ANGELES (NEA)—The scoreboard that hovers over the left-field bleachers in Dodger Stadium flashes a message:

HAPPY BIRTHDAY GREETINGS MARILYN GROPER

WEST LA IAN HOVEY DETROIT

Later, in the same game, the scoreboard lights up another greeting:

WELCOME TO ANDERS MANSON STOCKHOLM, SWEDEN

Within a week, Marilyn Groper in West Los Angeles, Ian Hovey in Michigan and Anders Manson in Sweden will receive, gratis, a 5x7 glossy photograph of the scoreboard which flickered those personalized messages.

Over the summer, the Los Angeles Dodgers, from the publicity office of Fred Claire, will mail out 5,000 such photos at a cost of 95 cents each (for printing, mailing folder, stamp).

Sometimes, underneath that scoreboard, the fans get a little raucous. The Dodgers had to cut out the sale of beer after Pete Rose of the Cincinnati Reds kindly threw a ball there and unkindly got the ball back on his posterior. A special detail of the Los Angeles Police Department has roamed the area, and six security guards have checked bleacher fans for hidden beverages.

Yet every Sunday the Dodgers send their players into the stands of the stadium for half an hour to sign autographs and get close to the fans. Even reliever Mike Marshall, a notorious autograph recluse, goes.

The selling of the Dodgers, claims Peter O'Malley, the president of the club (and son of Walter F., now chairman of the board), results from hard work. "I can't imagine," he says, "any organization putting in more hours at the park than we do. We try to involve the fans as much as possible. The fans enjoy it out here."

WALTER O'MALLEY: "Ladies and gentlemen..."

"The O'Malleys have done an excellent job of selling the team to the community," observes visiting pitching star Tom Seaver of the New York Mets, who used to sit out in the bleachers when he was a student at USC in Los Angeles.

The left-field scoreboard, which also recognizes groups and different suburbs, makes the people feel as if they're part of the team. It's as if O'Malley is presenting to the fans, "Ladies and gentlemen, your Los Angeles Dodgers."

"It's something they don't do in New York. They don't recognize the community. In our ball park, they say, 'You come here and we're going to entertain you.' It's not like here where they say, 'We're happy to have you with us.'"

"This," points Andy Messersmith from the sunken dugout at field level, "is the best place to play baseball."

Messersmith has a unique vantage point. He also used to pitch for the neighboring California Angels near Disneyland and has the rare distinction of being a 20-game winner in both the American and National Leagues.

"I was depressed initially when I found out I was traded to the Dodgers," he admits. "I was leaving old friends. But the Dodgers are No. 1. We were fighting for third down there in Anaheim. I think the National League is the better draw, especially the Dodgers. They have a tremendous following all over the country."

(Al Downing, also a Dodger pitcher and a World Series starter in '74, broke in with the New York Yankees. "Nothing," he says, "will match the excitement of playing in Yankee Stadium. You were part of New York. The whole atmosphere is different here. The fans, they'll come out and watch you play. But they're cold, and that's it." In the ninth inning of a close 2-1 tussle with the New York Mets, fans were streaming out to beat the traffic.)

The enigma of the Dodgers' popularity is that they don't have many personalities to sell. Mike Marshall, the iconoclastic Cy Young Award winner, is the closest thing to a drawing card. Steve Garvey, the MVP winner last year, was criticized by his own teammates as "too businesslike." And their manager, Walter Alston, who has worked on one-year contracts for the last 22 years, has to be baseball's most prosaic man, an anomaly in star-conscious southern California.

A post-game interview with Alston is like sitting on a fence in Darrtown, Ohio (his home town), watching traffic go by. In his manager's cubicle, while eager reporters press close, he chews on a slice of boiled ham pressed between two slivers of white bread, mulls a question, belches once and allows, "No, I'm not going to change my lineup because we lost." The long pauses between bits of conversation are not pregnant.

Later, Alston expounds on the phenomenon of the Dodgers as an attraction:

"In 1973, we had seven or eight inexperienced players. A lot of people feel we blew the pennant. (The Dodgers, after leading their division into September, finished second.) I don't. We won 95 games. Men like Davey Lopes, Ron Cey, Bill Russell, Bill Buckner, Steve Garvey, hadn't played much. Now I think the fans feel these are their boys, especially after winning last year."

"We draw because this is a sports-minded town. We are No. 1 climate-wise, park-wise, fan-wise and player-wise."

Rams' owner Carroll Rosenbloom, experienced with fickle fans, counters, "I don't know what'll happen if they start losing. This is a town that goes for winners."

To draw three million spectators, the Dodgers would have to average 37,500 for each of their 80 playing dates. Breaking fast, they led their division and were right on target until the Reds overhauled them in early June. Only a closing charge on the spurring Reds—attendance dropped as Cincinnati pulled away before the All-Star break—can put them in reach of that attendance goal again.

But Peter O'Malley, the president of the Dodgers, isn't disturbed. He figures that he still has the big game in town.

"Five or six years ago," he says, "it was popular to take a shot at baseball. Now it's popular to take a shot at pro football."

"In southern California, we're the bell cow."

He has the statistics to prove it.

MURRAY OLDERMAN

PRO CHARTS

PITTSBURGH STEELERS

COACH'S OUTLOOK:

Chuck Noll isn't looking ahead to another Super Bowl. He wants to make the playoffs first. "The division is stronger," he claims. "We'll have to improve our short passing game. We want to control the football, and the defense will again have to force turnovers." It (the defense) will.

OFFENSE

Receiving—Perhaps best and deepest wide receiving corps in all football. Question of which stars are going to start—Frank Lewis and Ron Shanklin, or Lynn Swann and John Stallworth. In Steeler system, tight ends primarily block, and both Larry Brown and John McCa-min qualify. Rating—excellent.

Running—As Franco Harris rushes, so go Steelers. He had super second half in '74. Rocky Bleier has to win job again as Franco's running mate, Vietnam medals or no. Steve Davis, heading for unexpected retirement, would play lot more if he could hold throw football. Rating—very good.

Line—The names aren't very recognizable—they don't turn up on all-pro lists—but Steelers get good service out of six men for the five positions (Gerry Mullins, a guard, can also swing at tackle). Tackles, once considered weak, now stabilized with Gordon Gravelle, Jon Kolb. Rating—good.

Quarterback—Looks like Terry Bradshaw has matured enough both as talent and as leader to stay ahead of electric Joe Gilliam, Terry Hanratty. Has his confidence now. Rating—good.

DEFENSE

Line—The soul of the Steelers. This could be the best front four of all time. Joe Greene gets the major attention but the most overlooked man is Ernie Holmes, a power laceration on the other tackle. L. C. Greenwood is a devastating rusher. There is a depth problem, with only Steve Furrer available. Rating—excellent.

Linebacking—Superb on the outside with longtime reliable Andy Russell coming off fine year and Jack Ham the best ball-hawking linebacker in game. Eventually, Loren Toews will replace Russell. In the middle, Jack Lambert was the rookie surprise of '74. He's a hitter. Rating—very good.

Secondary—One possible area of change on club. Top rookie Dave Brown could play either corner or safety. Donnie Shell is pressing strong safety Mike Wagner. That doesn't mean Noll is dissatisfied with any of the incumbents. Free safety Glen Edwards was particularly good last year. Rating—good.

Kicking—In the same competent feet of placekicker Roy Gerela, who has own following (Gerela's Guerrillas), and 37-year-old punter Bobby Walden. Rating—very good.

SUM-UP:

This is still young team buoyed by a Super Bowl triumph, with only two starters over 30, and needing only consistency on offense to sustain a budding dynasty.

Prediction: first in AFC Central.

Despite rough spots Illinois lottery has been profitable gamble

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (AP) — The head of the Illinois State Lottery says the state's gamble on the game paid off handsomely despite some rough spots early in its just-completed first year.

"I can recall a few sleepless nights and cold sweats," said Lottery Supt. Ralph Batch in a recent interview.

"When you stop and analyze what we did, it's amazing. We set up a $150 million business overnight," he said.

Ticket sales began July 30, 1974, and the first drawing was held 10 days later.

An anniversary drawing is planned tonight at the Springfield State Fair when someone will be come the state's seventh instant millionaire.

Ticket sales clipped along at a 5.5 million a week pace, and Batch said when the books close on first year operations, more than $60 million in prizes will have been allocated to the holders of 1/4 million winning tickets.

The prizes awarded in the first year ranged from $20 to $1 million, and a 26-year-old college student took home a prize of $50,000 a year for life in one of the new special games.

In addition, the lottery has produced $60 million for the state treasury to be used for normal government operations, Batch said.

"After four or five months, I was less than optimistic that we could produce the $60 million that the sponsors of the lottery bill said we would," Batch admitted.

But he said the addition of bonus ticket stubs to the basic 50 cent weekly ticket and the introduction of two new $1-a-ticket games at various times of the year helped boost participation in the lottery program.

"I can't tell you how much each of the new games added to our sales, but you expect routine sales to decline around the holidays and in summer months when people are away on vacation," he said.

State lotteries nationwide got a boost when federal legislation passed during the winter to eliminate laws, which prohibited certain types of activities that some said promoted lotteries. The legislation made it clear that radio and television stations could broadcast lottery results, and the mails could be used to transmit news of the lottery.

Lotteries are now under way in 13 states.

Several hundred Illinois lottery ticket agents had to drop out of the program when they couldn't peddle enough tickets to make any money. Some 10,000 licensed lottery ticket agents — gas stations, drug stores and other retail outlets — get 2 1/2 cents per ticket sold and 1 per cent of any winnings over $5,000 for a single ticket sold.

"Those who dropped out were the ones who shouldn't have been in it in the first place," Batch said. "At first, we appointed them on a first-come, first-serve basis. But as you mature and do the market research on a more professional basis, you make changes."

With the $150 million a year business came the usual paraphernalia — some 167 new jobs, a $1.9 million payroll, a fleet of air-conditioned station wagons for lottery officials to collect unsold tickets and encourage more sales. The lottery also has its own showmobile, which contains the flashing lights and multicolored backdrop used for weekly drawings.

A Las Vegas-style neon sign urging viewers to "Play To Win" in the lottery was set up in the parking lot of what had been a vacant warehouse on the south side of Springfield. The lottery also shares space with the state Department of Revenue in the refurbished quarters.

When the lottery legislation was considered in the General Assembly, some critics called it a thinly disguised tax, which would prey upon the hopes of the poor.

"I think you'll find the evidence quite to the contrary," Batch said. "There has been very little penetration by the lottery into the inner city. Neither the poor or the very rich are playing the game to any significant extent."

Batch said he based his remarks on a survey taken three months after the lottery began. It produced this profile of the typical lottery ticket buyer: a blue-collar worker between 50 and 55 who makes $7,500 to $15,000 a year. Males are more likely to buy tickets than females and whites play the lottery more often than blacks and other minorities. The buyer usually purchases two 50 cent tickets a week.

Of the six millionaires, only one — an insurance company clerk — has left her job. The others include a 30-year-old bachelor who owned a pest extermination business; a housewife from the Chicago suburbs; a Peoria policeman; a retired factory worker; and a supermarket checker.

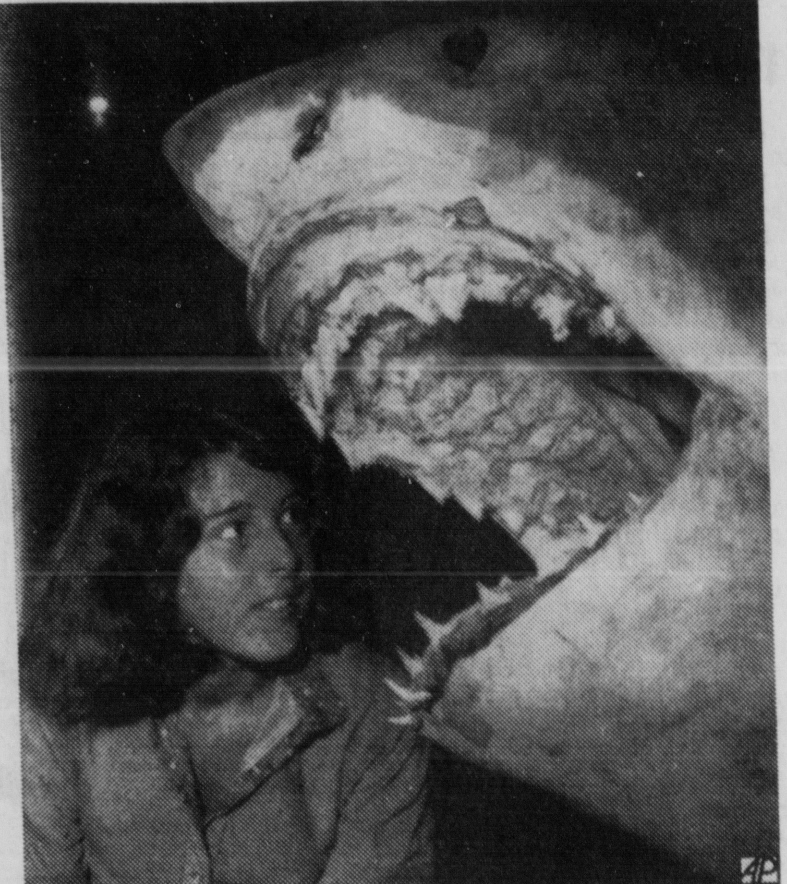

Only the supermarket checker and the former insurance company clerk showed up recently at a luncheon for the millionaires in an exclusive restaurant atop a Chicago skyscraper.

The list of big prize winners in the Bonanza game is another example that winners represent a cross-section — a telephone company maintenance man; a recently unemployed newspaper photographer; an iron worker; a prison accountant; a beer brewery worker; a painter; and a Chinese-American who said through an interpreter he would use his money to open a Chinese restaurant.

But none of the winners has been reported as making extravagant moves with their new wealth. This may in part be due to the fact that $1 million winners get their money in $50,000 chunks for 20 years while $300,000 Bonanza winners get $20,000 checks each year for 15 years.

Batch said despite the publicity about the lottery, 7 to 8 per cent of the lottery prizes money has gone unclaimed.

Lottery tickets can be redeemed up to a year after the drawing date. Friday will be the last day that the first week's ticket can be redeemed.

Tricky names for new fish lures

CHICAGO (AP) — Little George, Big George, Super George, Fat Albert, Dedly Dudley, Diamond Jack — they aren't the names of extraordinary individuals, but titles of lures that fishing bait manufacturers hope will gain wide acceptance and big sales.

Blabbermouth is not a talkative individual but a bait. Bang Tail? No, it's the common appellation for a horse, but in this case a lure. The Deep Six is hopefully not the final dive but another type of lure.

These and hundreds of other lures and baits along with thousands of other items that fishermen may be expected to buy are being shown at the current 18th annual American Fishing Tackle Manufacturers Association Trade Show. The three-day affair is closed to the public.

Among new products that will be available to users in several months is a new all-purpose fly line that may be used for flies, bass bugs, poppers, light lures or even live bait. The line is braided nylon and is competitively priced by the manufacturer, Gladding-South Bend Tackle Co.

Smoker-Craft Inc. is showing a 13-foot aluminum canoe with extra ribs for bottom rigidity and improved flotation. The company also has an 11-foot aluminum canoe weighing 55 pounds that may be easily carried "into small fish-filled lakes," the company says.

An electric fishing reel put out by Elec-Tra-Mate weighs up to four pounds less than earlier models and has up to 10 per cent more power. A reel put out by Johnson Reels Co. has a double drag feature, which the company says makes it "virtually impossible to break a line."

New baits and lures perform the usual gymnastics in water as they did years ago under other types of names. Whether they are of metal, wood, soft and hard plastic, many are scented with cheese, garlic, and fanciful odors designed to attract fish.

The Teeny Bopper of Dragon Fly Company Inc. is "practically guaranteed to catch fish from coast to coast."

A Wigwag Minnow, shown by Burke Fishing Lures, has a life-like body and a curved tail for realistic and exciting underwater action.

Confrontations, but Ford popular with Congressmen

WASHINGTON (AP) — A year after President Ford took office and expressed hopes for a good marriage with Congress, the record of vetoes, override attempts and flat disagreements looks like a clear case of incompatibility.

Yet Ford's personal popularity with his former congressional colleagues, by all appearances, has held up remarkably well. This is especially true among House members—Democrats as well as Republicans—who were undisguisedly happy to see one of their number make it to the White House, even by the somber path that events charted for Ford.

There are some Democrats who argue that the relations between Ford and Congress cannot accurately be called confrontation. Of course, this line could be strategic as the Democratic leaders of Congress try to persuade Ford not to veto the extension of oil price controls. Approval of the six-month extension would give more time for the tortuous process of working out a compromise energy policy.

Majority Whip John J. McFall, D-Calif., for one, contends that what is going on is executive-legislative bargaining carried to the ultimate with vetoes, efforts — usually unsuccessful — to override and then more compromise attempts.

As for personal relations at Ford's frequent get-togethers with members of Congress, McFall grinned and asked, "How could I not be civil with Jerry Ford?"

A Republican assessment, from Rep. Silvio O. Conte of Massachusetts, is that the Ford-Congress personal reunions are "very cordial, very warm." That goes for Democrats, "but not to the extent of giving him a vote," Conte said.

There are occasional dissonances, complaints that Ford, like others before him, is becoming inaccessible.

A Democratic subcommittee chairman said he was concerned about a situation under his jurisdiction that he thought required immediate attention, so he wrote asking for an opportunity to discuss it with the President.

"I got back a flunky letter saying it was under consideration," he said.

Ford has unsparingly used the huge publicity opportunities of the presidency to berate the Democratic-controlled Congress for what he says is a failure to come to grips with the energy crisis and recklessly refusing to hold spending to a level that could abate inflation.

His nationally televised speech in which he ripped off calendar pages to illustrate his charge of foot-dragging still ranks some Democrats.

Majority Leader Thomas P. "Tip" O'Neill, D-Mass., who from time to time plays golf with Ford, began weeks ago making a daily brief speech at the beginning of the House session denouncing the administration and not sparing the President.

In one of his latest blasts before Congress recessed, O'Neill said: "You name it. He's vetoed it ... It's hard to think of any group of Americans who haven't been hurt by President Ford's vetoes ...

"He's a good friend, but he's been a disaster for the country."

But a Republican who has attended some of Ford's informal sessions with his old colleagues told a reporter, "You ought to see Tip when he's with the President. It's good old Jerry, hugs, gifts...Then he gets on the floor the next day and kicks the —out of him."

Ford, ascending to the presidency at a time of national shock, rode in on a wave of good will on the part of the public and especially of his old congressional associates.

The Worry Clinic

and Salvation Army, Boy Scouts and YMCA been humanitarian outgrowths of the churches?

"But what arguments could I use to demolish his caustic attacks on religion?"

Atheists Are Sick

As a rule, an atheistic of the sort Louise describes, is sick so he needs psychiatry.

For such a paranoid obsession usually goes back to his childhood where he was ultra dominated by religious parents.

Maybe he coerced him with an austere, Puritan viewpoint of the Bible but if he was too young to strike back at that time, he bides his time till he is grown.

Then, though his parents may even be dead, he continues to hit back at them by trying to demolish what they stood for.

In similar manner, many of the liberal free spenders of taxes and foes of our superb American "Free Enterprise" system, are the offspring of wealthy Americans who ruled their childhood with an iron hand.

In such cases, it is futile even to try to argue with them.

But here are some interesting facts for them to ponder:

Saul (St. Paul) was a contemporary of Jesus and apparently conversed with people who had been healed by Christ or who were in that first church picnic where Jesus fed the 5,000.

For it was about 30 A.D. when Christ was crucified.

And in 35 A.D. Paul headed for Damascus to suppress the early Christians.

En route, his blindness occurred.

If Jesus were a myth, can you imagine 10 Apostles going to cruel, tortured deaths to swear to Christ's having been their Teacher for those three years in Judea?

Yet those 10 Apostles remained steadfast till the end, with all but St. John dying under torture. As the 11th remaining Apostle, he lived to a ripe old age.

Paul was thus not talking about a Person who lived centuries before his time!

He was surrounded by eye-witnesses and saw in the courage of Stephen, the strong convictions of those who were eye-witnesses of Christ.

Furthermore, as Dr. Henry Hitt Crane of Detroit used to tell our Chicago Sunday Evening Club members, Jesus was the missing piece in the jigsaw puzzle of why mankind was placed on this Earth.

Until Christ's birth, all people save Abraham and the Jews, believed in many little gods, but all such deities were pictured as cruel, sadistic despots, to be placated with sacrifices.

Jesus broke that tradition by showing that God was a loving father, willing to forgive and glad to cooperate with any of us children who wish to play ball on His team.

Calvary was thus God's reciprocity for Abraham's willingness to sacrifice Isaac to prove his love for Deity.

Calvary was God's reciprocity and the ONLY case in all religious history where Deity ever dignified us human beings by sacrificing to us!

Butz treated to some bad language

WASHINGTON (AP) — Agriculture Secretary Earl L. Butz, an earthy Indianan who has been known to use words stronger than gol-durn, heard some salty, sea-blue language the other day that few farm boys pick up behind the barn.

According to associates, Butz's meeting early Wednesday with Maritime Union leaders was perforated for an hour with X-rated expletives rarely heard in the decorous halls of the Agriculture Department.

The meeting involved Thomas W. Gleason, president of the International Longshoremen's Association; Paul A. Hall of the Seafarers Association; and Jesse Calhoun of the Marine Engineers Benevolent Association.

Butz, who sometimes tells shady stories and ethnic jokes, was reportedly outclassed by the union leaders' epithets and vivid descriptions of what he could do if their demands were not met.

The maritime leaders are upset over recent sales of U.S. grain to Russia and prospects that more may be sold. Supported by AFL-CIO president George Meany, they threaten to block ocean shipments of the grain unless the Ford administration can guarantee that the sales will not hurt American consumers.

In the unions' view, Butz is a prime culprit in all this because of his unrelenting push for larger farm exports, which he says help everyone since they offset much of what Americans import including Middle East oil.

The meeting Wednesday was in Butz's office. Nothing was settled except that "Butz learned some new words, just dirty ones" from the Maritime leaders particularly Hall, one source said. "You could tell he's worked the ships."

While Gleason and the others left the Agriculture Department to inform Meany and other labor leaders what had happened, Butz and his aides were left "wondering what it all meant" and whether to issue a public comment, one informant said.

A while later, the department's information office issued a terse one-paragraph statement saying that Butz and Gleason "each presented his view" about the grain sales.

Spokesmen added that Gleason and the others were not convinced by Butz's claim that the sales would have "minimal impact" on U.S. food prices.

No further meetings between Butz and the union team were scheduled, but Gleason's longshoremen announced that AFL-CIO Maritime union leaders would gather next Monday to plan strategy.

Meanwhile, the Labor Department on Thursday — a day after the stormy session with Butz — announced that wholesale prices rose 1.2 per cent in July, spawned by higher food and fuel costs.

"I don't know how it could have been any hotter in there (Butz's office) but probably it was a good thing they met before the wholesale price report came out," an Agriculture Department spokesman said Thursday.
